Plucked by Love

A RADICAL OFFERING

While I prefer mountain majesty, I will admit that beaches can be beautiful. From the crashing of the waves to the rising of the sun and to the nobility of the swimming dolphins (more on that later), beaches do have many elements that can lead the mind to the goodness and love of God.

Just think of pelicans. Scooping up fish in their bills, they seemingly float back to their nests to offer the gift of their labors to their chirping chicks. As the myth has it, though, there is more to the pelican than just this. For when pelicans are unable to find fish to feed their young, they peck at their own breast to feed the little ones with their own body and blood.

In the Christian tradition, this was very quickly adopted as a symbol of Christ. He offered the gift of Himself as the fruit of His labors, and He gave us His very Body and Blood (Matthew 26:26-28). To do this, He laid down His life. This wasn't just so that He could destroy sin and death. While that was necessary, it wasn't the same thing as giving sustenance to support us on our journey. Rather, for that, He needed to provide us with food that would nourish the body and the spirit. So, the Lord gave us Himself, "the true bread from heaven" (John 6:32), which He even now continues to give us at each and every Mass. For in the Mass, we enter into the mystery of the Lord's passion, death, and resurrection. We are filled with the graces of redemption and fed by His Body and Blood, which come to us in the Eucharist. In other words, Christ, the Divine Pelican, feeds us with Himself so that we can be nourished and sustained for our journey to heaven.

This is why we so often see pelican imagery in Catholic churches. From vestments to decorative elements on the walls, pelicans can take a prominent place as a symbol that unites Christ's sacrifice to our entrance into that reality at Mass.

At St. Vincent Ferrer, there is another striking placement of a pelican. At the apex of the vault above the baptistry, we see a pelican. There, it signifies that those who are baptized are washed clean by the Blood of the Lord, symbolically pouring forth from the heavens. Similarly, in the new rite of baptism, those who are baptized are sometimes led to the altar so that the connection between the sacraments of initiation becomes even more prominent. In other words, the baptism should lead us forward to confirmation and Holy Communion. The graces of the heavenly Pelican should lead us from the place of being washed in His Blood to the place where we are fed by His Body and Blood in the Eucharist.

OUR OFFERING

What does this mean for us, though? It's one thing for us to accept Christ's self-offering, but it's another thing for us to return that offering of ourselves to Him.

How much do we hold back? How much do we see our time and our resources as something that we're owed or that we need to keep safe? Should we not rather see them as sheer gifts from a loving God? When you think about it, all our time on this earth is a gift from God. All of our financial resources during this life are gifts from God. None of that is ours to hoard or hide away. Rather, we are called to radically give ourselves and all that we have back to God. Each and every day, He invites us to give thanks to Him by growing in faith, hope, and charity and offering everything back to Him as we make the sacrificial offering of ourselves.

While this is hard, the Lord is generous and gives us the grace to do just this. In the Eucharist, He gives us all the strength and grace to give of ourselves. In the Eucharist, He gives us the grace to respond to His invitation of love so that we can return everything back to Him. Is this challenging? Absolutely. But, is this possible? 100 percent!

May the Lord give all of us the graces needed to radically offer everything back to Him!

In the Son of God, the Divine Architect,

MUSIC NOTES

The Franco-Flemish musician, Jean Richafort, was one of the most highly-respected composers of the generation that followed Josquin. Richafort was employed in the French Royal Court, composing the motet Consulator captivorum for the funeral of King Louis XII in 1515, and then joined the musical entourage of King Francois I in 1516. It is very likely that Richafort spent several of his most productive years in Rome as a singer in the Papal choir, following Josquin's example. Although few personal details of his life survive, Richafort was highly respected by colleagues. Gombert, Morales, Mouton, and Palestrina each set parody Masses to Richafort's motets.
